

PH.D. IN THE ANCIENT WORLD

Encompassing the ancient world from the western Mediterranean to East Asia, from the Neolithic to the early Medieval period, the Institute for the Study of the Ancient World is focused on creating a new generation of scholars whose work crosses over the disciplinary boundaries of traditional departments. In this way, knowledge of the cultures, art, languages, religions, economic systems, and interactions of the ancient world can be deepened and expanded. Doctoral students at ISAW have the opportunity to take research seminars, tutorials, and directed studies with ISAW's outstanding dedicated faculty. Students are also able to take courses in other NYU departments and at other universities in the metropolitan area. Additionally, the ISAW Visiting Research Scholar program brings in experts in a variety of fields from across the world who participate in the graduate seminars and present public lectures, serving as an additional vital resource for our students.

Matriculated students in good standing at ISAW receive five years of fellowship support as they progress successfully through the program and can apply for a sixth year of support. ISAW graduate fellowships cover the cost of tuition, fees, and health insurance premiums and provide an annual stipend, which is currently $43,969 for the 2021-22 academic year. Students are also eligible to apply for departmental funding for conferences, research, and fieldwork.

FACULTY

Claire Bubb

Assistant Professor of Classical Literature and Science

Roderick B. Campbell

Associate Professor of East
Asian Archaeology and
History

Lorenzo d'Alfonso

Professor of Western Asian Archaeology and History

Sebastian Heath

Clinical Associate Professor of Computational
Humanities and Roman
Archaeology

Robert G. Hoyland

Professor of Late Antique and Early Islamic Middle Eastern History

Alexander Jones

Leon Levy Director and
Professor of the History of the Exact Sciences in Antiquity

Antonis Kotsonas

Associate Professor of Mediterranean History and Archaeology

Beate Pongratz-Leisten

Professor of Ancient Near
Eastern Studies

Daniel T. Potts

Professor of Ancient Near Eastern Archaeology and History

Sören Stark

Associate Professor of Central Asian Art and Archaeology

Lillian Lan-ying Tseng

Associate Professor of East
Asian Art and Archaeology

Apply online now for Fall 2022 enrollment:

isaw.nyu.edu/graduate-studies

Recommended deadline:

December 18, 2021

Final deadline:

January 4, 2022

Virtual open house: October 25, 2021

isaw.nyu.edu/events/open-house-2021

ISAW Looks for Students Who:

- Have sufficient preparation in at least one discipline or domain in order to work beyond its limits
- Have proficiency in at least two languages appropriate to their area of study (one ancient, one modern)
- Are committed to research that crosses boundaries of time, space, and discipline; students whose academic interests include parts of the ancient Old World that are often underrepresented in traditional academic departments, including Africa, Central Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia, are especially welcome to apply

